Train Caught Fire in Tun-

People Who Were Buying Tickets Instantly Suffocated.

Terrible Mortality Caused by Smoke Having No
Escape Except Through Stairways--Victims
Men, Women and Children About Equally Divided--Account of Frightful Disaster.

Paris, Aug. 11—Firemen who were able to penetrate the Metropolitan this morning found that the railroad train which caught fire in the tunnel last evening caused one of the most terrible catastrophes that has ever occurred in this city. So far 90 corpses have been found and the search for victims has not ended.

At 4 o'clock this morning the smoke in the tunnel had cleared sufficiently to allow descent at the Menilmontant station. On the stairs seven corpses lay. They were of people who were buying tickets and had been suffocated instantly. Further on the corpse of the ticket agent was found, but the wicket of his booth had not been damaged. The fumes were so dense at this point that the firemen were not able to proceed further. More horrible discoveries were made at the Couronnes station. Corpses were strewn on every step.

At 7 o'clock this morning 45 bodies had been found and removed to the surface. Later 37 bodies were removed, bringing the total number of casualties to the number mentioned above.

The people had left the burning train and were trying to reach the open air when they fell asphyxiated. The bodies were lying in convulsed attitudes and many were holding handkerchiefs to the mouth. The face of each was swollen and the skin in a number of cases peeled off. The victims were about equally divided between men, women and children. Some of the victims were handsomely dressed. They have not as yet been identified.

The engineer of the first train ascribes the catastrophe to a bar of iron falling from the car to the track, and a "cross circuit" being formed, the wood of the car was ignited by the electric current. The terrible mortality was caused by the smoke having no escape except through the stairways. Eighteen months ago the Paris fire department warned the officials of the Metropolitan electric railway company, to put air holes at regular distances of one hundred yards the whole length of the route in order to allow the fumes to escape. Neglect to obey this order is responsible for the number of deaths.

The officials of the railway company place the number of dead at 54. Thirteen bodies have been recognized and 20 have been burned beyond any possibility of identification.

Throughout the morning the people witnessed sad processions of hearses and other vehicles carrying the dead to the morgue where heart rending scenes occurred. Relatives and friends of persons who have not been seen since the disaster occurred are congregated at the door of the morgue and at the entrances to the railway station and many encounters with the police have taken place by the people trying to break through the lines to enter the morgue or reach the subway in the hope of finding missing ones.

The exploration of the tunnel for bodies continues, but with extreme caution as the collapse of a part of the street is feared. Here and there in the tunnel are large pools of blood which reveal the fearful struggles for life that took place. The only prominent person so far found among the dead is the artist, Sandillon.

As the official inquiry proceeds fresh details are brought to light and the catastrophe assumes most horrible proportions. The most vivid and consistent version of what took place is

The air soon became unbearable. I saved ten people, the last one being the station master himself. He had refused to leave his post and had fallen asphyxiated. Then the denseness of the smoke and stifling fumes made all further penetration of the tunnel out of the question."

Paris, Aug. 11—A catastrophe occurred last evening on the Metropolitan Electric railway, which runs mostly underground, in which many persons are believed to have lost their lives. Up to 3 o'clock this morning seven bodies have been recovered and the search continues.

One of the trains broke down at Menilmontant station, which is in a poor and populous quarter of Paris. The train was promptly emptied and the train which followed was ordered to push it to the repairing sheds. On the way these two trains caught fire but the employees succeeded in escaping. Meanwhile a crowded train reached Les Couronnes, the preceding station, and the officials seeing smoke pouring out of the tunnel gave the alarm. A panic ensued, the passengers struggling to escape from the station. Amid the increasing smoke many attempted to return along the line toward Belleville and were suffocated.

The officials seem to have lost their heads, and are unable to say how many passengers went out. The firemen for several hours were unable to enter the station of the tunnel owing to the dense smoke which poured out in black clouds. Meanwhile thousands of people gathered about the station. All the police and fire officers were on the spot. The excitement was intense.

Finally the firemen flooded the burning mass, and shortly afterward they entered the tunnel. They brought up the corpse of five men and two women, all belonging to the working class. There are believed to be many more bodies in the tunnel.

BABE DIED

In Its Mother's Arms and She Begged to be Allowed to Keep It.

Columbus, O., Aug. 11—Sobbing over the dead body of her four-months-old babe at the Union Station last night Mrs. Seuppe, a Swedish emigrant, begged for permission to take her loved one to her new home in the Dakotas.

With other emigrants the woman, with her husband and father, were on their way to the West. The child was taken scrougly ill and the trainmen sent the mother to the station to give the babe medical attention. In the excitement that followed the husband and father continued West on the train, and while meaning over the separation the child died in the mother's arms. The poor woman wanted to carry the lifeless form in her arms until the father could be found to relieve her of the burden.

in Maine.

Boston, Aug. 11—President Grover Cleveland accompanied by Joseph Jefferson and a nephew of Mr. Jefferson, passed three hours in Boston last evening on his way to the woods. He did not name or locate the woods, but it was learned that they were those of Northeastern Maine that he referred to. The baggage included a large amount of fishing paraphernalia.

Professor Peluger of the University of Bonn maintains that one-third of all the deaths registered in Munich are due to heart disease, brought on by the immoderate use of beer, and that tobacco also claims a large percentage of the victims.

VETERANS

DON'T LIKE TREATMENT GIVEN
GENERAL MILES.

Effort to be Made at G. A. R. Encampment to Make Him Commander-in-Chief.

Chicago, Aug. 11—Wearing the blue blouse and the gold-branded hat of a member of the Grand Army of the Republic Lieutenant General Nelson A. Miles, but two days retired as the head of the army, reached Chicago en route to the annual encampment of the G. A. R. at San Francisco. He was the central figure of an encampment delegation of Maryland veterans who are becoming him for Commander-in-chief of their national organization.

General Miles and those with him harbor a deep resentment for the curtness with which the American powers have placed him on the retired list. The General makes no attempt to conceal this feeling of resentment, and to a reporter who boarded his train east of Chicago he spoke frankly.

"Those who read the brief order and those who have been cognizant of the events for the past few years will understand the situation," said the General. "I believe that any one can run and read and understand.

"But the country generally believes that the President and Secretary of War have been guilty of insulting curtness," was suggested.

"Many of my friends in the East have made that charge," was the quiet reply. "They have said much for me. I have nothing more to say, however. I believe my friends understand the situation. For me to say anything at this time would be in bad taste. The matter is closed for the present."

Among the prominent members of the General's staff during the rebellion who are with the Miles party are General Nathan Church of Michigan; Major John D. Black, of Valley City, N. D.; General J. S. McEwen, of Albany, N. Y.; and Major Alex Swenney, of Steubenville, Ohio.

AMERICANS AND ITALIANS FIGHT

Clarksburg, W. Va., Aug. 11—At the O'Neill coal mines at Wilsonburg, in a vendetta, Italian miners attacked American mine employees. Pistols, shotguns and bowie knives were used.

Thirty or forty shots were fired, and Lewis Cortes one of the attacking Italians, was killed.

Lewis Chappano was wounded in the leg and side and may die. Another Italian received a charge of shot.

DIES OF LOCKJAW

And Father Sues Merchant Who Sold
Toy Pistol to Boy.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 11—Last July 1 the 9-year-old son of John Macinnes, of Allegheny, purchased a toy pistol at the store of John Lucht, No. 514 Brighton road, Allegheny. The pistol was defective and exploded when the boy fired it. The powder and a piece of the pistol entered the lad's hand. He died from lockjaw a few days later. Now the father has entered suit for $5,000 damages against the storekeeper, alleging he had no right to sell the boy the pistol. As there were scores of deaths from toy pistols here the suit is an interesting one.

Cynthiana, Ky., Aug. 11—The Jett-White trial began promptly at 8:20 o'clock this morning and B. B. Golden resumed his argument, having spoken for two and half hours yesterday afternoon. Golden will be followed by Commonwealth Attorney Byrd, then Judge Black for the defense with Judge A. Fryer making the closing speech to night or tomorrow morning.

Golden continued to analyze the testimony of Ewen, his chief aim being to combat the testimony of the star witnesses for the prosecution. He said there was no proof that Hargis and Callahan had any connection with the murder and their testimony must be believed, rather than Ewen's. He said Hargis would have been a fool to hire Jett to kill Marcum, when Jett and Hargis were not friendly and that Hargis and Callahan were greatly surprised when the shots were fired.

Golden again ran in the Goebel assassination before the solid Democratic jury Judge Osborne again warned him that pontics could not enter the case.

EWEN WAS INDIGNANT.

Cynthiana, Ky., Aug. 11—In his speech in the Jett-White case Monday afternoon Attorney Golden made a most vicious and virulent attack on the character of witness B. J. Ewen. After the adjournment of court, Ewen waited at the court house door for Golden fully 30 minutes declaring he would no longer submit to the base slanders which Hargis' attorneys have heaped upon him.

Very few men knew of Ewen's determination to call Golden to account, but the information in some way reached Golden and he either got out by the rear door or remained somewhere in the court house until Ewen's friends succeeded in making him believe that Golden had gone.

THE POWERS TRIAL.

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 11—On the convening of court for the Powers trial this morning, commonwealth's attorney Franklin asked and secured an order from the court to Warden Lillard, of the Frankfort penitentiary, to bring before the court Henry E. Youtsey, who is serving a life sentence for the Goebel murder. The order directs that Youtsey be brought here Wednesday at 8 o'clock and he will go on the stand on the convening of court for the morning session. His examination will take up all of Wednesday's session of court.

The first witness called this morning was Sheriff Henry Broughton of Bell county, one of the state's star witnesses. He did not answer and Attorney Franklin asked a forthwith attachment for him to the sheriff of this county, and of Fayette. Broughton was here yesterday.

John A. Black, a banker, of Barbourville, the first witness on the stand, told of a conversation with Powers relative to the bringing of the mountain army to Frankfort, in which the defendant said the purpose was to intimidate the members of the legislature.

At Idaho Springs, Col. today 83 prominent men were arrested on criminal warrants for the arrest and deporting of 18 union miners.

Sheriff Morgan's wife at Washington, Ind., prevented the escape of five prisoners today.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 11—Mrs. William Astor, the recognized leader of the "smart set," gave a ball and dance at her villa, Beechwood, Monday evening, and to use the expression of one present, "It was an Adamless function." Mrs. Astor had invited four hundred guests and only forty-three men were present to do honor to the hostess. It came about because of the slump in Wall street, which sent scores of society men scurrying to New York. The ball, however, was a brilliant success. Alice Roosevelt was there.

Judge Ream of Canal Dover Orders
Dixon Taken to Massillon State Hospital.

Canal Dover, O., Aug. 11—Bert Dixon who shot and killed his father, Ex-county Coroner Dr. James Dixon, on July 2 was adjudged insane yesterday by Probate Judge Ream and was taken at once to the Massillon asylum. Dr. Dixon was suffering from smallpox at the time of the tragedy. The son has been confined to his home manacled to the floor for the past six weeks. He also contracted the loathsome disease but has recovered.

The hurricane which has prevailed in the West Indies for several days, struck Santiago last night. The storm is now moving toward Havana. All telegraph wires to eastern portion of Cuba are down. It will probably sweep the Atlantic coast.

The representatives of the Macedonian Revolutionary Committee have published a statement saying that the number of insurgents in the district of Monastir is 8,000, and that they are armed with rifles purchased in Greece. It also states that August 2, 600 insurgents destroyed three detachments of Turkish troops numbering altogether 100, and attacked the town of Kitchovo, but failed to occupy it.

The insurgents, however, destroyed the Turkish village of Drougovo, whose inhabitants had come to the assistance of the garrison at Kitchovo. The statement further says that three Christian villages, Smilevo, Krouche and Bolona, near Monastir, have been completely destroyed by the Turkish troops.

An infernal machine, in the form of a box filled with dynamite, was sent from Ithilopolis to Uskub timed to explode at the latter place the moment that two passenger trains were to pass. The train upon which the machine was sent was detained at the frontier depot at Ziborche, where it exploded last night, damaging the station, but injuring nobody.

Portis Sarafoff, the active leader of the Macedonian insurgents has warned the directors of the Oriental railway not to sell passenger tickets, for all the railways, he says will be destroyed.

Further fighting occurred yesterday near Sorovich, the Turkish troops coming into collision at the village of Kallar with a large insurgent band of twenty-four Turkish battalions. The SKY PILOT

CHAPTER XI.
Gwen's Challenge.

Gwen was undoubtedly wild and as the Sky Pilot said, wild and wicked. Even Bronco Bill and Hi Kendal would say so, without, of course, abating one jot of their admiration for her. For fourteen years she had lived chiefly with wild things. The cattle on the range, wild as deer, the coyotes, the jack rabbits and the timber wolves were her mates and her instructors. From these she learned her wild ways. The rolling prairie of the foothill country was her home. She loved it and all things that moved upon it with passionate love, the only kind she was capable of. And all summer long she spent her days riding up and down the range alone or with her father or with Joe or, best of all, with the Duke, her hero and her friend. So she grew up strong, wholesome and self-reliant, fearing nothing alive and as untamed as a yearling range colt.

She was not beautiful. The winds and sun had left her no complexion to speak of, but the glory of her red hair, gold red, with purple sheen, nothing could tarnish. Her eyes, too, deep blue with rims of gray, that flashed with the glint of steel or shone with melting light as of the stars, according to her mood—those Irish, warm, deep eyes of hers were worth a man's looking at.

Of course, all spoiled her. Ponka and her son Joe groveled in abject adoration, while her father and all who came within touch of her simply did her will. Even the Duke, who loved her better than anything else, yielded lazily, admiring homage to his Little Princess, and certainly, when she stood straight up, with her proud little gold crowned head thrown back, flashing forth wrath or issuing imperious commands, she looked a princess, all of her.

It was a great day and a good day for her when she fished the Sky Pilot out of the Swan and brought him home, and the night of Gwen's first "prayers," when she heard for the first time the story of the Man of Nazareth, was the best of all her nights up to that time. All through the winter, under the Duke's guidance, she, with her father, the Old Timer, listening near, went over and over that story so old now to many, but ever becoming new, till a whole new world of mysterious powers and presences lay open to her imagination and became the home of great realities. She was rich in imagination and, when the Pilot read Bunyan's immortal poem, her mother's old "Pilgrim's Progress," she moved and lived beside the hero of that tale, backing him up in his fights and consumed with anxiety over his many impending perils, till she laid him safely across the river and delivered into the charge of the shining ones.

The Pilot himself, too, was a new and wholesome experience. He was the first thing she had yet encountered that refused submission and the first human being that had failed to fall down and worship. There was something in him that would not always yield, and, indeed, her pride and her imperious tempers he met with surprise and sometimes with a pity that verged toward contempt. With this she was not well pleased and not infrequently she broke forth upon him. One of these outbursts is stamped upon my mind, not only because of its unusual violence, but chiefly because of the events which followed. The original cause of her rage was some trifling misdeed of the unfortunate Joe; but when I came upon the scene it was the Pilot who was occupying her attention. The expression of surprise and pity on his face appeared to stir her up.

"How dare you look at me like that?" she cried.

"How very extraordinary that you can't keep hold of yourself better!" he answered.

"I can!" she stamped. "And I shall do as I like!"

"It is a great pity," he said, with provoking calm, "and, besides, it is weak and silly." His words were unfortunate.

"Weak!" she gasped, when her breath came back to her. "Weak!"

"Yes," he said; "very weak and childish."

Then she could have cheerfully put him to a slow and cruel death. When she had recovered a little she cried vehemently:

"I'm not weak! I'm strong! I'm stronger than you are! I'm strong as—as a man!"

I do not suppose she meant the innuendo. At any rate the Pilot ignored it and went on.

"You're not strong enough to keep your temper down." And then, as she had no reply ready, he went on: "And really, Gwen, it is not right. You must not go on in this way."

Again his words were unfortunate. "Must not!" she cried, adding an inch to her height. "Who says so?"

"God!" was the simple, short answer. She was greatly taken back, and gave a quick glance over her shoulder as if to see him who would dare to say "must not" to her; but, recovering, she answered sullenly:

"I don't care!"

back from perdition. It is the one bright spot in my life in this blessed country. Every one else thinks me a pleasant or unpleasant kind of fiend."

I protested rather faintly.

"Oh, don't worry your conscience," he answered with a slight return of his old smile. "A fuller knowledge would only justify the opinion." Then, after a pause he added: "But if Gwen goes I must pull out. I couldn't stand it." As we rode up the doctor came out. "Well, what do you think?" asked the Duke.

"Can't say yet," replied the old doctor, gruff with long army practice. "Bad enough. Good night."

But the Duke's hand fell upon his shoulder with a grip that must have got to the bone, and in a husky voice he asked:

"Will she live?"

The doctor squirmed, but could not shake off the crushing grip.

"Here, you young tiger, let go! What do you think I am made of?" he cried angrily. "I didn't suppose I was coming to a bear's den or I should have brought a gun."

It was only by the most complete apology that the Duke could mollify the old doctor sufficiently to get his opinion.

"No, she will not die! Great bit of stuff! Better she should die, perhaps! But can't say yet for two weeks. Now remember," he added sharply, looking into the Duke's face, "her spirits must be kept up. I have lived most fully and cheerfully to them inside. You must do the same." And the doctor strode away, calling out:

"Joe! Here, Joe! Where is he gone? Joe, I say! Extraordinary selection Providence makes times; we could have spared that lazy half breed with pleasure! Joe! Oh, here you are! Where in thunder?—But here the doctor stopped abruptly. The agony in the dark face before him was too much even for the bluff doctor. Straight and stiff Joe stood by the horse's head till the doctor had mounted. Then with a great effort he said:

"Little miss, she go dead?"

"Dead!" called out the doctor, glancing at the open window. "Why, bless your old copper carcass, no! Gwen will show you yet how to rope a steer." Joe took a step nearer, and, lowering his tone, said:

"You speak me true? Me man, me no papoose." The piercing black eyes searched the doctor's face. The doctor hesitated a moment, and then, with an air of great candor, he said cheerily:

"That's all right, Joe. Miss Gwen will cut circles round your old cayuse yet. But remember," and the doctor was very impressive, "you must make her laugh every day."

Joe folded his arms across his breast and stood like a statue till the doctor rode away. Then, turning to us, he grunted out:

"Hoo good man, eh?"

"Good man," answered the Duke, adding, "but remember, Joe, what he told you to do—must make her laugh every day."

Poor Joe! Humor was not his forte, and his attempt in this direction in the weeks that followed would have been humorous were they not so pathetic. How I did my part I cannot tell. Those weeks are to me now like the memory of an ugly nightmare. The ghostly old man moving out of and into his little daughter's room in useless, dumb agony, Ponka's woe-stricken Indian face, Joe's extraordinary and unusual but loyal attempts at fun making—grotesquely sad, and the Duke's unvarying and invincible cheeriness—these furnish light and shade for the picture my memory brings me of Gwen in those days.

For the first two weeks she was simply heroic. She bore her pain without a groan, submitted to the imprisonment, which was harder than pain, with angelic patience. Joe, the Duke and I carried out our instructions with careful exactness to the letter. She never doubted, and we never let her doubt, but that in a few weeks she would be on the pinto's back again and after the cattle. She made us pass our word for this till it seemed as if she must have read the falsehoods on our brows.

"To lie cheerfully with her eyes upon one's face calls for more than I possess," said the Duke one day. "The doctor should supply us tonics. It is an arduous task."

And she believed us absolutely, and made plans for the fall round up and for hunts and rides till one's heart grew sick. As to the ethical problem involved, I decline to express an opinion, but we had no need to wait for our punishment. Her trust in us, her eager and confident expectation of the return of her happy, free, outdoor life, these brought to us, who knew how vain they were, their own adequate punishment for every false assurance we gave. And how bright and brave she was those first days! How resolute to get back to the world of air and light outside! But she had need of all her brightness and courage and resolution before she was done with her long fight.

EDUCATING OYSTERS.

Training Schools in Which the Bivalves Are Taught Some Sense.

"A school for oysters," said a dealer in fish, "is an institution that you would swear could not exist, for oysters are notorious for their stupidity. It is, however, a fact that there are many oyster schools. I will explain them to you in such a way that you will believe in them. An oyster's intelligence is limited, but still it has intelligence. Years ago certain wise fish dealers discovered that if you take an oyster suddenly from its subaqueous life giving water inside it all escapes and the oyster dies. But if you expose an oyster to the air gradually, lifting it out of the water for a few minutes and then returning it again, it gradually learns that to keep its shell closed when out of the water is the best thing for its health. These investigators found that they could take two oysters, one trained and one untrained, and the trained oyster, keeping its shell closed while out of the water, would live a long time, while the untrained one, opening its shell, would die in a few hours. Therefore training schools for oysters were established. The schools are in appearance nothing more than reservoirs full of water. Oysters are put in them, and the water is drained off and then returned again. It is kept off for a few minutes at first, then for ten minutes, then for half an hour and so on. Oysters in these schools learn that they will live longest and keep healthiest out of water if they hold their shells tight shut. As soon as they learn this they are graduated and go out into the world."—Philadelphia Record.

A Quick Witted Partridge.

Nesting upon the ground, the partridge is likely to be disturbed. A bird of this species was once startled by a plow passing within a yard or so of its nest. Destruction was almost a certainty, as the plow must pass entirely over it in the next round, and the laborer wondered how the partridge would act. The time necessary for going around the field was about twenty minutes, yet in that almost incredible period the parent birds had effected the removal of some twenty-one eggs to a safe spot. Careful search led to the discovery of the bird calmly seated upon her treasures in the bottom of the hedge out of reach of the plow. Nineteen partridge chicks were eventually hatched and duly escaped unmolested. —London Tit-Bits.

The Ingenious Magpie.

The magpie is nothing if not ingenious. He always barricades his bulky nest with thorn branches, so that to plunder it is by no means an easy matter, but when circumstances oblige the "pie" to build in a low bush or hedge—an absence of lofty trees being a marked feature of some northern localities—he not only interlaces his home, but also the entire bush, in a most formidable manner. Nor does he stop here. To "make assurance double sure" he fashions a means of exit as well as entrance to the castle, so that if disturbed he can slip out by his back door, as it were.

MAKES WORK EASIER.

Newark People Are Pleased to Learn How It Is Done.

It is pretty hard to attend to duties with a constantly aching back. With annoying urinary disorders. Doan's Kidney Pills make work easier.

They cure backache. They cure every kidney ill.

Amos Fry, shoemaker, of Webb st., says:

"For several years I was never free from pain, a constant sagging pain through my kidneys. It was dull and dead, so that I had to get up and move around if I had been sitting up for any length of time. I took several kidney medicines, but I got no good worth speaking about, for I remained just the same. Through a notice in a local paper I commenced using Doan's Kidney Pills, which I obtained at Crayton's drug store. They did the work they promised for they completely took all that miserable pain out of my back."

REDUCING BIG FARMS.

How Great Tracts in the Northwest Are Being Broken Up.

SETTLERS PREPARING HOMES.

William E. Curtis Writes of the Changes in Minnesota and the Dakotas—Diversified Farming Increasing in Profitableness and Popularity—Nature of Crops Raised in Arid Sections.

The bonanza farms of Minnesota and North Dakota which for many years were the wonder of the world, where 20,000, 25,000, 30,000 and even 40,000 undivided acres were planted to wheat under the same management, are being broken up and reduced in size, writes William E. Curtis from St. Paul to the Chicago Record-Herald. The reasons therefor are too many and too complicated to be discussed in a newspaper letter, as they vary in almost every case. There are advantages as well as disadvantages in "bonanza farming," but as a rule few men are capable of handling more than 3,000 or 6,000 acres. One reason worth mentioning, however, is that after the financial depression of 1893 wheat went down and remained down, while land went up and remained up in price, and several of the owners of the big farms "realized" upon their property, selling out large tracts to newcomers.

It is also true that diversified farming is becoming more and more profitable and popular in North Dakota and Minnesota, where poultry raising, dairying and the cultivation of vegetables for the city markets is being gradually adopted by the farmers. Minnesota butter has been fortunate in taking high prizes in several interstate competitions, which has advertised it to the world and stimulated prices. Flax and corn are also being raised to a considerable extent, and barley, oats and other grains are now considered a necessary part of a farmer's crop, the proportions being about the same as in other sections of the country.

"Freak farming" is now obsolete in the northwest. In North Dakota particularly flax has been gradually increasing its acreage and production and is especially advantageous for what is called "a breaking crop"—that is, the first crop on newly broken farms—because it more nearly pays expenses than any other. The corn acreage is also constantly increasing in North Dakota, and, although the fact has long been disputed, there is no trouble in raising good corn and large crops of it on that dry soil. In Montana clover and alfalfa are receiving a great deal of attention. A large area of fine clover is now being raised, in the Gallatin and Bitter Root valleys, and a heavy acreage of alfalfa is now to be found in the Yellowstone valley. These valleys, with that of Clark's fork and the Tongue river, are especially adapted to heavy forage crops, and the so called arid section of Montana, where irrigation is impossible, is being slowly redeemed. In a recent interview Frank W. Hall, assistant to the director of the state experiment station, said that good crops could be raised in all or nearly every part of the arid section, provided care is taken in the selection of the grain or vegetables.

"Excellent wheat is being raised in the arid district," said Mr. Hall, "and a number of farmers are growing fine crops of alfalfa and red clover where irrigation is impossible and where the land was believed to be a hopeless desert. Only one crop of forage plants can be raised, however, without irrigation instead of two and often three, as in the well watered regions. It is expected that the result of our experiments will create an active demand for land which has gone begging till now, and steps are being taken to organize a colony."

A WATERMELON PALACE.

Novel Feature of a Carnival For Oaktown, Ind.

One of the chief events that will occur in Knox county, Ind., this summer will be the watermelon carnival that will soon be held in Oaktown, Ind., says the Chicago Inter Ocean. According to the arrangements, the affair will be on a gorgeous scale and will be a novelty. It is planned to build a palace of watermelons and to arrange the melons in many different styles of architecture. As Oaktown is in the heart of the melon district it is believed the carnival will be a most interesting sight.

The crop this year will be the largest ever known, judging by present conditions. More than 1,000 acres above last year's acreage have been planted, and preparations are making to handle hundreds of cars. Last year entire melon trains left Oaktown, and hundreds of melons were wasted because the railroad company was unable to supply the demand for cars. There was no bank in Oaktown last year, but one was established last winter for the purpose of assisting the shippers in their business transactions.

Largest Chemical Factory.

The largest factory of chemicals in the world is said to be the aniline and soda establishment of Baden. The works employ 148 scientific chemists, 75 technical engineers, 305 clerks and more than 6,000 workmen.

Nigeria's New Police Force.

Northern Nigeria is to have a new police force 1,000 strong, recruited in the territory and on the lines of the royal Irish constabulary.

A new literary organization has been instituted in Chicago under the name of "A Bunch of Onions."

DOCTORS

PEN A FEW LINES ABOUT THE RECENT GAME.

In Conclusion They Issue a Challenge Which is Put in Several Forms.

(Communicated)

We, the doctors of Newark, feel that the game of ball played on July 7th was not a fair game, for the reason that we did not accept a challenge to play the merchants and their clerks (one clerk had been allowed them to offer one medical student), and second, for the reason that we were honest in our claim of an understanding that that it was to be at least a seven inning game. We believe that the merchants were honest in their claim of an understanding that it was to be a five inning game. They seem to have talked this over among themselves. We had not discussed that point, but took it for granted, that it was to be a game of at least seven innings, since we were playing the second game of the day and were not limited for time. In view of this honest misunderstanding, we insisted on playing not one more inning, as the sporting editor of the Advocate made us say, but two more innings. That, we thought, a fair proposition to the leaders in the game at that stage, especially since they were playing four clerks accustomed to the rules of the game, and practical players. While we are not contending for the record of the decision rendered by Empire Kinsey, everyone who knows anything about the rules of the game, knows that the umpire has the right to decide in just such cases as this, and that he must do according to the rules of the game, and so he decided, the sporting editor of the Advocate to the contrary notwithstanding. Again the sporting editor says it was generally understood throughout the grand stand that it was to be a five inning game.

We differ from him, since our game was last on the program, and the true understanding of it throughout the grand stand was that we would play it out—nine innings, lest rain or darkness interfere.

Both sides had played and won before and they were considered physically able to play a full game, the more because this was to be a sort of champion game.

These games were inaugurated to furnish amusement rather than to give an exhibition of skill in playing, and for this reason, and in the spirit of all true sportmen, we ask fair play and a fair, unbiased report. Give the facts or get the facts from both sides before charging us with "ill timed protest," and we shall abide by the decision.

Now, to settle all dispute over the game, we, the doctors, challenge the merchants to a nine inning game, to be played on Friday, August 14, by the same players that took part in the disputed game of August 7.

Or we, the registered physicians, challenge the bona fide merchants (no clerks allowed) to a series of seven or nine inning games, beginning Friday, August 14.

Or we, the registered physicians, challenge the bona fide merchants (no clerks) to a single game of seven or nine innings to be played on Friday, the 14th of August.

Any change in this challenge to be announced by the umpire when the game is called, and the result of the game or games to be decided by the umpire on its merits, according to the rules governing the league games.

Respectfully, COMMITTEE.

FATHER.

Of Mrs. Charles C. Cooper Dies in Dayton—Mrs. Cooper is Now at Atlantic City.

Word has been received in Newark that A. H. Reynolds, a veteran of the 157th O. V. I. in the Civil War, had died at the Soldiers' Home in Dayton. He was the father of Mrs. Charles C. Cooper of Ninth street, who is now at Atlantic City, while Mr. Cooper is spending his vacation on a fishing trip along the lakes.

As yet neither has been heard from so it cannot be known whether word reached them or not.

ROBBED

BY HIGHWAYMEN IN CITY OF COLUMBUS.

Newark Man Was Left Unconscious in the Street, Having Been Robbed of Sixteen Dollars.

William Harrington the assistant blacksmith at the Jewett Car works at night, had quite an experience while in Columbus several nights ago. He was walking down Front street, when he was set upon by four men, knocked down and robbed of his money, about $16. He was left lying in the street in an unconscious condition, where he was found and cared for by the police, until Sunday, when he returned home. No clue has been obtained as to the identity of his assailants.

MAYOR'S PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, by an act of the legislature of the State of Ohio, passed March 10th, 1864, it is made unlawful for any persons within the State on any day provided by law for the holding of elections in said state, to sell, barter, or give away, any spirituous, vinous or malt liquors, and all persons engaged in the business of selling any such liquors are required by said act to close their respective establishments; and

Whereas, by said act, it is made the duty of all Mayors of cities, within said state, on such election days to warn the inhabitants of such city of the provisions of such acts, and

Whereas, Friday the 14th day of August, 1903 is a day set apart for a special election to decide the question of issuing bonds of said city; therefore, I, Andrew J. Crilly, Mayor of the city of Newark, do hereby remind the inhabitants of said city of the provisions of said act and warn them that all violations of the provisions thereof, on said day, will subject the offender to prompt and speedy punishment. The police officers of the city will promptly close all houses found violating the provisions of said act, and forthwith report the same.

ANDREW J. CRILLY, Mayor.

The successor to P. M. Arthur, W. S. Stone, will follow Arthur's conservative policy. He is 42 years old.

DEMORALIZATION IN WALL STREET.

Sympathizing with those stock operators who have been caught in the Wall street maelstrom, the New York "Herald" does not seek to hide the facts of the situation, and the great national and international gambling game that has been played. Marking up the stock of speculative corporations and combines does not increase the wealth of the country, and it is equally absurd to argue the wealth of the country is decreased by the reverse process of contraction. The "Herald" boils the facts down in this telling way:

The present demoralized condition of the stock market, in short, is mainly the result of the gigantic overcapitalization of companies formed during the last few years, coupled with the most audacious manipulation of these inflated stocks for the purpose of distributing them to the public at ridiculously high prices. Instances will readily occur to mind of corporations organized and still controlled by some of the most conspicuous and richest bankers in New York—properties which by grossly exaggerated statements were foisted upon the public and about which the wealthy promoters do not now offer one word of encouragement to investors who see their property quoted at one-third of the price they paid.

The creation of real wealth is going on in the mines and mills and farms and foundries all over the continent regardless of reticketing bits of picture paper on Wall street.

Stands for the Enemy of the People.

(Communicated.)

The Pataskala Standard in its last issue said that the Republican county convention made a "ten strike" in nominating Dr. Watkins for Representative. Is it possible that Hanna intends to strike the boys with a "ten" only, when he comes up for re-election for U. S. Senator? The Standard thinks Watkins will make a "model legislator," which means in the eyes of the Republican press, a legislator who will vote for Mark Hanna first, last and all the time, and "stand pat" for the corporations in the conflict with the people.

Then the Standard rubs it in on the Democrats of Etina township who heretofore have voted with the Republicans, and it is asking Democrats to vote for Dr. Watkins so it will have another opportunity after the election to apply another dose of rubbing in. But the intelligent voters, not only of Etina, but of other townships, realize that a vote for Dr. Watkins is a vote for the corporations as enemies of the people, and a vote for Hanna, the arch enemy of every Democrat, the tyrannical boss of Republicans.

If you read between the lines in the Standard, it seems to think that Watkins will carry the west end of Etina township. But Democratic voters will do nothing this year to make "Jefferson and his followers turn over in their graves."

GENERAL MILES.

General Miles has done his country good service and his errors have been those which have brought no disaster whatever, being apparently the result of his own ambition and exalted egotism. Nevertheless, he will be remembered with gratitude for the things which he has done that will ever remain as of lasting importance.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

The Cincinnati Enquirer copies the above and makes the following able mud more than knee-deep to get any where. "Following the advice of General Miles would have saved thousands of lives and millions of money and a scandal that had to be quickly whitewashed on the commission plan to keep it from becoming worldwide. The victory over Spain would have been sharper and more decisive and much more to the general credit of the republic. "Since the advent of the present Administration frequent opportunities have been taken to insult, humiliate, and, if possible, degrade Miles, so that the advantage might be given to men

Fresh Air Outing.

Those children who are desirous of attending this outing will report promptly at 9 o'clock on the West Side of the park, on Wednesday morning, as the car will leave the square for Idlewild Park at that time. The King's Daughters will have charge. It is to be hoped that the little ones will enjoy this outing for a day at least beyond the din and dust of city life.

WHAT THE OLD DOCTOR SAID.

"Doctor," said I, "you say appendicitis is much more common than it was thirty years ago." "Indeed it is," replied the old doctor. "That we encountered this disease then, is true, but not with such appalling frequency. Appendicitis, these days, is almost as common as sore throat." "To what, doctor, do you attribute this increase of appendicitis?" "To hasty eating and to the use of foods which have a tendency to clog and fret the intestines and deaden peristaltic action. The way to avoid appendicitis and the surgeon's knife is to shun unnatural foods that beget intestinal torpor and constipation." "People who eat Shredded Wheat Biscuits do not get constipation and hence need not fear appendicitis. This perfectly natural food preserves the tone of the digestive tract and induces every excretory gland to subserve the body's interests. Have you tried this most delicious of all cereal foods?" "I have been eating your Shredded Wheat for over a year and it has completely cured me of constipation, with which I had been troubled for twenty years." Joseph Jessup, Belden Hall, Coronado Beach, Cal.

OHIO BRIEFS.

Circleville—The city board of review has completed its work having added $27,643 to the tax duplicate.

Springfield—State School Commissioner Bonebrake addressed the county teachers' institute Monday on the centralization of rural schools.

Springfield—Wittenberg college has just come into possession of a legacy of $1800 left to the institution by the late J. W. Tressler of Bryan, O.

Tiffin—Jacob Fischer, aged 35, a veteran of the Cuban and Philippine wars died of consumption and from the effects of two wounds received during his campaigns.

Hamilton—Jacob Kohler, a young machinist was adjudged insane and committed to the Dayton asylum by Judge Jones. His insanity is due to disappointment in love.

Piqua—Nicholas Varian, arrested for keeping his candy store open on Sunday, waived examination and was bound over to court in $100 which was furnished. His case is the first since the "blue laws" went into effect.

Upper Sandusky—W. T. Harding, a former resident of this city, is dead at Mt. Holly, N. J. He was a gardener of national reputation and laid out the beautiful Oak Hill cemetery. He was a native of England.

Toledo—Mrs. L. P. Sennell, a dressmaker, some months ago invented a "self-threading" sewing machine needle and secured a patent. Now capitalists are forming a stock company to manufacture the needle.

Dayton—William T. Davis, superintendent of the Miami Valley Leaf Tobacco company, was fined $20 and costs for employing a child under 14 years of age. He was prosecuted by a deputy from the office of the state inspector of factories and workshops.

Mamilton—The journeymen blacksmiths and horseshoers of Hamilton are on a strike because of the refusal of the bosses to concede a 9 hour day and an increase in the wage scale to $2.50 and $3 per day. Sixty-five men are involved in the strike, which tied up every shop in the city.

Wilmington—James Stafford, aged 15, Walter Green aged 12, and John Miller, aged 11 stole a horse and wagon at Washington C. H. They fled southward through New Antioch, where they stole a horse and buggy belonging to a Mrs. Fener of that town. The two were caught at Xenia.

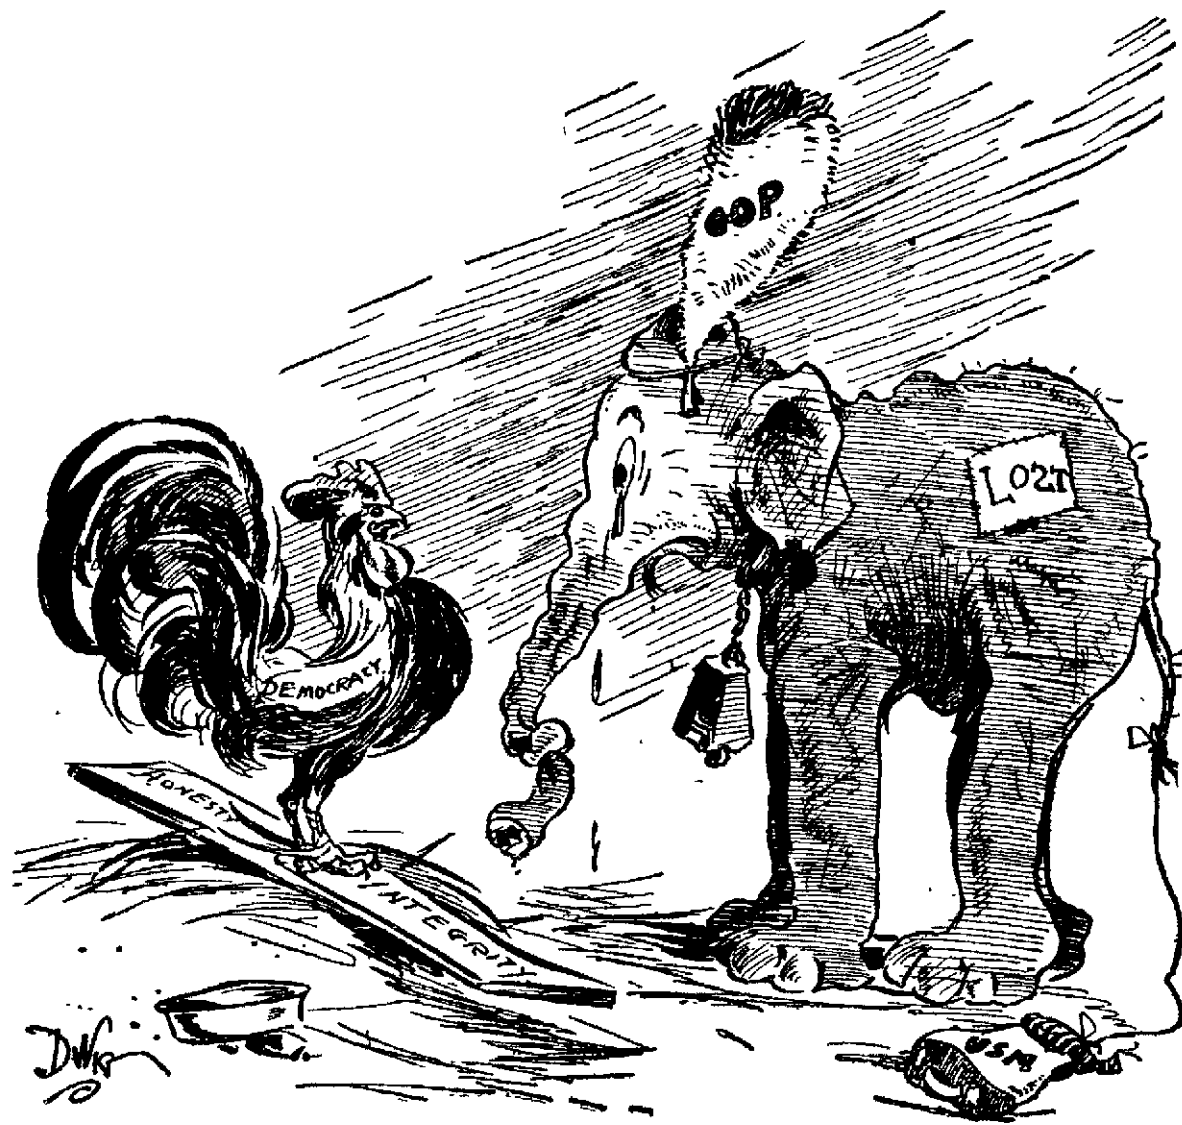

Youngstown—Miss Jessie Rigby and Miss Pessie Rigby, twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rigby, will on Wednesday, August 19, become the brides of John Tanner of Medina, O., and George Pyle of Wilmington, Del. respectively. The double wedding will be solemnized by Rev. J. B. Tanner, a brother of John Tanner.

Lima—John Stuck who has been working under the local manager, Flowd Whitley, as a solicitor for the Continental Insurance Company, collected the monthly payments on numerous policies, then left the city. In making receipts he was forced to sign Whitley's name without authority, and the manager swore out a warrant charging forgery. Stuck was captured at Celina.

BOLIVAR—YES, THAT POSTAL SCANDAL HAS ALMOST UNDERMINED MY CONSTITUTION. THE PROUD BIRD—WHY DON'T YOU TAKE SOME PAYNE KILLER?

and telling reply: "This is patronizing, caddish and contemptible comment on a brave and accomplished officer who has done his country more real service than half a dozen officers, from the Commander-in-Chief down, who have been nagging at him and trying to put him in an unfavorable light before the people. Now that the General retires it is a good time to say something of his career. It is said that he has been ambitious. Very well. The man without ambition has not the making of a good soldier in him. Good sense and sound advice have possibly been mistaken by the Roosevelt worshippers for egotism. Not one of the favorites of the Administration in the army can ever hope to make the army record Miles has made as a strategist and executive. Not one of them can touch him as a person comprehending a general scheme of army organization and war. Not one of them, through the liveliest stretch of the imagination, can exceed him as a brave fighting man on the field of battle.

"General Miles fought valiantly in the Civil War and in the campaigns against the Indians. He was an able officer on all occasions and rose from private citizenship to the ranking place in the army, through his own personal qualities, and not through favoritism in high places. He is a man of brains and of the highest personal courage. His deeds in battle are not the works of generous artists in oil; but he has been at death's door for his country many times. His record in one battle for the Union, when the surgeon told him he must die from an awful wound he had received, is worth more than the dress-parade pretenses of a thousand soldiers of another stripe.

"When the war for the liberation of Cuba was undertaken General Miles had ideas as to how the necessary organization should be effected, when hostilities should be opened, and how the war should be carried on. He was right in every particular. His advice, though it was entitled to great consideration on account of his position in the army and his splendid record as an organizer and fighting general, was ignored. The army was hastily concentrated in Florida in the wildest confusion. Provisions rotted in the cars and swindling contractors waxed wealthy in a fortnight. Artillery horses went to Santiago in one ship, the harness on another and the guns on another, and the whole transportation was on this blundering system. The troops were landed in a tangled mass at a season when they had to drag themselves in without a real war record. No doubt Mr. Roosevelt, in his suit, regrets the manner in which the General of the Army was treated, for it is said of him that he is good-hearted, though impetuous. Were the whole matter to be "acted over" again his course would no doubt be different: but it has long been too late to retract, and the "toadies" and blatherskies will of course trim their sails to the breeze the Administration has blown.

"Time flies and events multiply. The rising and active generation of today have affairs of their own to think of and to entertain them. Much important history escapes the average man. It is wholesome to remind them occasionally of what such men as Miles did before they were born, or at least before they were old enough to fully comprehend affairs. They should know that Nelson A. Miles is entitled to go into the soldier galaxy of Grant, Sherman, Sheridan, Hancock, McClellan, etc. He is one of the last of the old guard and has held himself in dignity and gallantry to the hour of his retirement. He can afford to sneer at the gibes and insults of those who never departed from the comforts of a feather bed to sleep on their arms on the cold ground."

ON OCEAN

One May Transact Business by Wireless Telegraph—No More Rest From Business Cares.

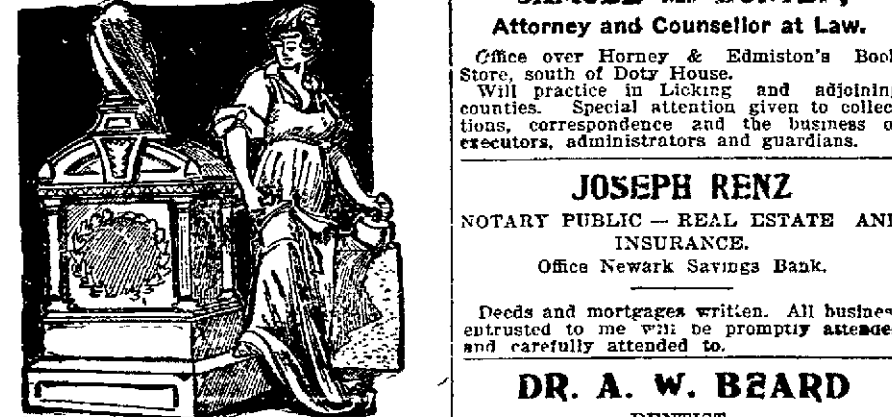

London, Aug. 11—The time will soon have passed when the busy American business men could have a rest, at least while crossing the ocean, as it is reported that, encouraged by the success of the Cunard line, all the first-class transatlantic steamship companies will soon have a regular staff of stenographers and typewriters on board all their ocean greyhounds.

Then the business man will every morning be able to receive a report from his New York office by wireless telegraph, he will dictate his answers to one of the marine stenographers, and thus be able to personally conduct all the more important parts of his business without an interruption.

There has been some doubt as to whether business men who had often been heard to tell how relieved they felt during the five days necessarily occasioned on board the steamers when they were out of reach of all business troubles, but the success of the experiments on board the Cunard steamers has clearly shown that even while tormented by the pangs of sea sickness, the twentieth century business man still wants to be kept in touch with his office.

NEW RIFLES

FOR NATIONAL GUARDSMEN ARE SLOW IN ARRIVING.

Some of the Regiments Will Have to Wait Till They Reach Newark
Before Getting Guns.

Columbus, Aug. 11—The force in the adjutant general's department is working hard shaping things up for the state encampment which will be held at Newark next week. The only drawback so far is the delay in the arrival of the new guns from the Rock Island arsenal, which was fully expected Monday. While notice of the order for shipment has been received from Washington, nothing has been heard from the United States arsenal indicating that they had been shipped. The requisition calls for 2350, and as there are only five days left to receive and repack them to the various companies through the state, considerable hush-ing is anticipated in distributing them.

The amount of work required to send the guns to the various organizations throughout the state can be judged from the fact that they are packed at the arsenal in boxes containing 20 pieces. These must all be taken out and the number recorded, re-packed and remarked to the company to which they are sent. It is probable that some of the companies will not receive them until after the arrival at camp. The First and Sixth regiments have the new guns now, together with the Company B and G of the Third, H of the Fourth, F and G of the Fifth, H of the Seventh, A and F of the Eighth and Company B of the Battalion of Engineers. This makes in all about 30 companies that have the new arms, while there are more than 90 companies in the state. In all probability if the guns arrive at all this week, the force at the state arsenal will be increased to expedite matters in the shipment.

GIVES DR. HARPER RAP.

Count Leo Tolstoi Thinks Educator Ignorant and a Barbarian--Deduction as to Trusts--An Interview With Tolstoi.

New York, Aug. 11—"Dr. William R.
Harper, president of the University of Chicago, is ignorant and a barbarian," according to Count Leo Tolstoi. This is on the authority of James Creelman, who interviewed the great Russian and publishes his views in the New York World.

Count Tolstoi declared that Americans should starve rather than work for John D. Rockefeller or any of the great trusts. "As for himself, he said it was his ambition to die a martyr's death, and he declared he had made earnest efforts to be hanged or at least to be sent to prison. Tolstoi has been asked to express an opinion of American trusts, and in the course of his answer said:

"Last year President Harper of the University of Chicago came to see me.
He told me of the millions of dollars that Rockefeller had given to the university. He seemed to think that these millions were of great importance. But when I came to talk to him about serious matters I found him to be really ignorant—quite a barbarian. He knew less about matters of intellectual and moral interest than a man might learn simply by reading the Review of Reviews for instance. Think of such a university directed by such a man. And yet that is one of the results of these trust millions.

"You talk of the trusts in America as if the question were important," he said. "To my mind the industrial questions are childish. The trust and the labor union are merely passing phenomena. A man does not have to live in an industrial center, where human slavery has been established. He does not have to live in a city. Because man has spoiled a part of the earth, is that a reason why people should stay there and suffer? No man should work for a man like Rockefeller.
He should work for himself. He should consider it a religious duty to refuse to work for a trust. Let a man who works for a trust in America and who seeks relief—let such a man go into the country and get a small portion of ground to cultivate. Let him give up luxuries. Let him cease eating meat. The cost of living will be less than one-sixth of what it was."

"And if a man cannot get ground to dig in, what then?"
"He should die rather than assist in supporting men like Rockefeller. It is his duty to die. If a military uniform were put on him and he were ordered to die he would do it proudly.
For what? For patriotism, that evil thing which has done so much harm in the world and which we should condemn and restrict rather than defend and spread. The trouble is that men are not ready to die for the right thing."

"But the trust system has produced Andrew Carnegie, and he is using his hundreds of millions of dollars to provide free libraries for the people," I suggested.
"Yes; but libraries are not necessarily blessings. A library of good books is a good thing, but a library largely made up of bad books is a curse. I do not understand that Mr. Carnegie fills his libraries with good books only."
"America is a nation absorbed in the pursuit of money, and yet," he folded his arms and bent his gray head—"and yet I will say of the Anglo-Saxon race that those few who are religious dare to live up to their principles. It is only just to say that. But the Germans are utterly without religion."
"It is a curious thing that the ordinary conception of the Germans is that he is an idealist and of the American and Englishman that they are practical. That is only an external description. The truth is that the German is only an idealist in words, in poetry, while there are Americans and Englishmen who can be idealists in deeds."

When the conversation was turned upon himself, Count Tolstoi said: "I have tried hard to get to prison—to be hanged, but I have failed."
"Tried to be hanged?"
"Yes; it is the best end—except to be burned. Sacrifice is the best end."

SHOOTING AFFRAY
Said to Have Been Prompted by Jealousy—Mrs. Albert Norman Has Husband Arrested—She Wants to Marry Another Man.

Mrs. Della Norman, wife of Albert Norman, a brass molder at the B. & O. shops, caused her husband's arrest about 3 o'clock Monday night, and on Tuesday morning filed an affidavit before Mayor Crilly charging him with shooting with intent to kill.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman have been separated for some months and the latter is employed at Grace Wilson's, 29 East Railroad street, as a domestic.

She says that she was called to the front door Monday evening and as she opened the door to admit the caller, she noticed her husband standing behind a tree in front of the house, and noticed him draw a gun which he pointed at her and fired just as she slammed the door shut.

Mrs. Norman says that her husband has annoyed her frequently since their separation and the filing of his petition for divorce last June. She says that jealousy is the cause and that he has frequently threatened to kill her. They formerly boarded at 381 Eastern avenue.

Tuesday morning Mayor Crilly fined Norman $20 and costs and gave him 20 days in jail for carrying concealed weapons, and later he will have to face the more serious charge.

Mrs. Norman says she intends to marry a soldier at the Columbus barracks named O'Hearn as soon as a divorce is granted, and that her husband knows this and intends to kill her if he can.

THE RAILWAYS
CLAIMS THIS ROAD IS WITHOUT FUNDS.

Encampment Travel Begins—To Prevent Car Famine—Another Ohio Bridge—Local Notes.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 11.—(Bulletin)—W. S. Stone, of Eldon, Iowa, was elected grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers today.

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 11.—Vice President Chancellor Pitney has appointed John W. Hardenburg of Jersey City and Lucian D. Rose of New York, temporary receivers of the Coahulla and Pacific railroad company, a New Jersey corporation, organized in 1889, in New Mexico between Saltillo and Torreon.

The application for a receiver was made by John T. Detwiler of Jersey City, one of the stockholders.

The liabilities of the company are given as $381,000, exclusive of a mortgage of $2,500,000 held in trust by the New Jersey Title, Guarantee and Trust company. The company was capitalized at $1,500,000 and received a subsidy from the state of Coahuila of $750,000.

There has been expended for the construction of the road $2,238,000. In the application Mr. Detwiler says the road is now practically without funds, and he is unable to make satisfactory traffic arrangements with connecting trunk lines.

To Prevent Car Famine.
General managers of the east-bound roads from St. Louis held a meeting a day or two ago and discussed the threatened shortage of equipment and the prevention to the greatest degree possible of the traffic congestions of last year. In order to secure the prompt loading and unloading of cars at St. Louis the following resolution was adopted:
Resolved, That each road member of the Terminal Association place an embargo in the regular manner on any and every industry situated on their tracks promptly when it is found that such industry has an accumulation of cars. No embargo should be made for a less time than three days.
The embargo it is claimed, will have the effect of relieving the congestion in the yards on both sides of the river.

Another Ohio Bridge.
Maysville, Ky., Aug. 11.—It is stated here on what is claimed to be reliable authority that the L. & N. has at last decided to bridge the Ohio at this point and extend its road to Columbus, O. It is said the money is ready for the work and the location of the bridge decided on. It is thought by some that the company is back of the Columbus and Ohio River road, now being built north from Ripley, much of the grade having already been completed between Ripley and Georgetown. Steel rails for 30 miles of that road have been delivered at Georgetown and the BURGULARIOUS STARS.

Planets and Sun May Pick Up Minor Solar Bodies.
Jupiter is much the biggest member of the family of stars which revolve around our sun; consequently the power of his attraction is greater than that possessed, for instance, by the earth. Jupiter's exploits as a burglar have caused very considerable annoyance and inconvenience to astronomers in the days before his powers were fully recognized.
In 1770 there appeared a fine comet, which was found to have an elliptical orbit round the sun of a comparatively small size that Mr. Lexell, its discoverer, calculated it would return in five and a half years, but in 1775 telescopes were vainly focused on the spot where it was expected to reappear, and again in 1781 it disappointed all observers. Mr. Lexell plunged into fresh calculations and after much research found that Jupiter was the culprit. The unfortunate comet had been rash enough to plunge into the sphere of the giant planet's attraction, with the result that it had been completely diverted from its former orbit and flung off into quite a different one of a twenty year period. It has never been seen again by any one on this earth and probably never will be.
Jupiter was also responsible for the delay which occurred in the return of that splendid visitant known as Halley's comet. Halley found that he was not the first discoverer of this big comet. It had appeared at least twice previously, once seventy five years before and again seventy-six years before that. The astronomer concluded that there would be a further delay in its third return and predicted that its next appearance would be 618 days later. He did not live to see it. But in 1758, the year he had prophesied for its reappearance, astronomers were waiting for it.

HUMORS OF MUSICAL LIFE.
Amusing Pranks the Erratic Types Played With a Composer.
Miss Maude Valerie White, author of numerous popular songs, has told a number of anecdotes, many of them at her own expense. I suppose, she once wrote in the Cornhill Magazine, all composers have had a laugh over the extraordinary mistakes which sometimes occur in the first proofs of their songs. I remember years ago writing a very sentimental song, in which the line occurred—
I've never once regretted the vow I made that day.
My feelings may be imagined when I found they had printed—
I've never once regretted the row I made that day.
Miss White also told about an amusing mistake which occurred in the programme of one of her concerts: A well known singer and very good friend of mine was down to sing my two songs, "To Marry" and "Crabbed Age and Youth." But the newspaper announced something very different. Not content with drawing up a programme of my concert, it drew up a programme of my future, for I read as follows:
To Marry—Maude Valerie White Crabbed Age and Youth.
As I am a good many years older than the friend in question, the coincidence struck me as particularly funny, and I cut the programme out of the newspaper and sent it to him. By the first mail next morning I received an identical cutting from him, with an inquiry whether he was to take this as a formal announcement of our engagement and expressing a mild surprise that he had not been consulted in the matter.

He Knew Sir Walter Scott.
In a booklet called "Sir Walter Scott and His Country" published in Edinburgh the author quotes this reminiscence from an old man he met who had known the romancer:
"Aye," he drived Sir Walter fine. "I seen him driving out in his carriage and pair, wi' Tom Purdie on the box seat. He had on a shepherd's tartan plaid and a gilegarry cap wi' two black ribbons hanging down the back. I mind his downy toe—Maida, he ca'd it—and an awfu' work he made over the beast. But he was as pleasant a man as you could speak to, though he wasn't thought muckle of as a pleader when they made him shirra o' Selkirk. Is it his bulks you're speirring on? Ou, aye, ye'll find a' his bulks ben the hoose."

Carved on the Tomb of Ingalls.
This extract from "Ingalls' essay on "Grass" is carved on the glacial boulder which marks his last resting place: "When the fitful fever is ended and the foolish wrangle of the market and forum is closed grass heals over the scars which our descent into the bosom of the earth has made, and the carpet of the infant becomes the blanket of the dead."—Kansas City Star.

SAFE
Is Locked and the Cashier Gone
New Holland Folks Are a Bit Worried
EXPERT ON THE WAY TO OPEN THE SAFE.
CASHIER BROWN TOLD HIS WIFE That He Was Going to Cincinnati to Visit Brother, But It Seems He Isn't There.

New Holland, O., Aug. 11.—Developments are at a standstill today regarding the Union bank of this place, the cashier of which, John K. Brown, is missing. Until the expert from Canton who is expected today arrives, nothing can be known of the contents of the safe.

Washington C. H., O., Aug. 11.—The people of New Holland and vicinity, are excited over the strange disappearance of John K. Brown, cashier at the Union Banking company's bank, of place.
Cashier Brown left Saturday afternoon, telling his wife that he was going to Cincinnati to visit his brother, Lou Brown. He was expected home on the excursion train from Cincinnati on Sunday evening. When he failed to arrive as expected a message was sent to his brother in Cincinnati, and the latter answered that he had not been there. The other bank officials were notified and an investigation was put on foot at midnight.

The bank janitor was found and the bank entered. In Brown's private desk an envelope was found containing the original combination to the safe, and there was rejoicing, as it was supposed that the safe could be easily opened. The outside door came open nicely to the movements of the combination, but when the directions were applied to the combination on the inner door it failed to respond, and the discovery was made that the combination had been changed by some one. President Myers, of the New First National bank of Columbus, O., a safe expert, was called and he arrived last night in his automobile. After working on the safe for several hours he gave up the job and returned home. The Devolt Safe and Lock company, of Canton, Ohio, manufacturers of this safe, were applied to and agreed to dispatch an expert, who is expected to arrive tonight.

Until the safe is opened absolutely nothing will be known of the actual condition of the bank. At the meeting of the bank officials two weeks ago the cashier's report showed deposits aggregating $160,000, but it is supposed to be much larger than this now, on account of the sale of wheat, oats and hay by the farmers. There have been times this year when the deposits have reached $198,000. The amount of cash actually on hand is unknown. Brown, while cashier, did about all the book-keeping. He was a banker with few superiors.

Brown stands high in society and business circles of this section. He is treasurer of the K. of P. lodge, treasurer of the Masonic temple company, Grand Master of the Masonic lodge, a member of the Eastern Star and clerk of the school board.

The Union bank of New Holland was established 12 years ago, and has long been a prosperous institution. John K. Brown has been its cashier since its organization. It has been paying regular 8 per cent annual dividends.
Brown's strange disappearance came to most people like lightning from a clear sky. There are some who say that Brown may only be away on a trip and will return all right, while others think that he has met with foul play. The secret is locked up in the safe, however, and it will not be long until the truth is known.
The Union banking company is capitalized with $25,000 paid up capital, of which Cashier Brown owns $6,600.

A Judge's Romance
I am a man of dignity. It has been asserted that I have a certain pomposity about me. While I am a bachelor of forty-five no man has ever charged me with any softness toward the other sex.
My position was thus when the courts were closed for the summer season of a certain year and I retired to my usual resort on the seashore.
It may not strike you as quite consistent when I say that a few days after my arrival a woman appeared who caught my attention. She was registered as "Mrs.," and it was understood that her husband would appear later. She was handsome, well formed, refined—in all outward respects a lady. I did not have speech with her, but I admitted to myself that but for my dignity and position I might have attempted what is legally known as a mild flirtation.
People seemed to understand intuitively that a judge of special sessions did not care to hear about trifles, and so no gossip was poured into my ears.
However, I learned later on seven or eight rooms were robbed inside of a week. The robberies occurred by day, and generally at meal times, and the plunder was money and jewelry. In one case the loss amounted to $500, in another to $800, in a third to over $1,000.
After the first complaint had been made the landlord set a watch, but in the face of that three more rooms were plundered and a confiding guest who kept several hundred dollars in his trunk instead of the hotel safe found it missing one day after luncheon. Then two detectives were employed, and all the 250 guests felt themselves under espionage, if not suspicion—all but I. How could landlord, detective or any one else suspect the integrity of Judge Coke?

The robberies ceased as suddenly as they had begun, but for reasons known to themselves the detectives decided to search the baggage of certain guests, one of whom was the handsome Mrs. Blank. I heard nothing of this at the time, but as I left my room on the day of the search I encountered the lady with a small package in her hand and she frankly said to me:
"Judge Coke, I have not had the honor of an introduction, but I wish to beg a favor of you. As the clerks are busy this morning, and as the porter does not look like a man to be trusted, you would put me under many obligations by taking this package to the express office. It is directed to my husband, as you see, and contains papers that he must have soon. I am sorry to thus impose upon your good nature, but—"
"Say no more, madam," I interrupted, as I took the package from her; "I shall be only too happy to be of service to you."

I may have smiled as I lifted my hat and bowed, but I contend that I lost none of my dignity, and of course I did not make it an excuse for any extended conversation.
I met her on the street, a full block from the hotel, upon my return, but as I handed her over the receipt I merely raised my hat again and spoke of the weather.
The search was made quietly and with the consent of the guests, but it proved futile.
The next three days passed without excitement, and I took it into my head to order a carriage and be driven out. It has always been my opinion that a judge looks well as he rides out in a landau with head erect and arms folded.
I was being bowled along the boulevard connecting my resort with one five miles away, with my driver fully conscious of my dignity and importance, when a parol was waved at me from the sidewalk, and I made out a lady at the end of it. More than that, I made out Mrs. Blank, who said to me as my carriage halted at the curb:
"Judge Coke, were you going to drive over to Surf City?"
"I am on my way there, madam," I replied as my hat came off at the proper angle.
"Then—then—"
"What is it, madam?"
"I have a friend over there who is ill, and there is no train for two hours. I know it is presumption on my part, but—"
"Not at all, madam. Let me assist you in. I will have you there in three-quarters of an hour, and the obligation will be mine."

There were no languishing smiles, no goosy eyes on my part. Indeed, I think that most of our conversation during the drive referred to the law directly or indirectly. I was a bit surprised that she should ask to be set down on the public square instead of at her friend's house, but dignity forbade me even to raise my eyebrows. She bowed and returned thanks; I raised my hat and murmured, "Don't mention it," and we parted.
My position demanded that I should forget her as soon as possible or until I met her at breakfast next morning, and I had fairly succeeded when I returned to the hotel two hours later. Then she rushed back into my memory at a bound. The landlord and the detectives were looking for her. It had become known that she was an adventuress whose photograph adorned more than one rogue's gallery and who had even "done time" for theft. It was she who had cleaned out the rooms and given me the plunder to express away, and it was she who had robbed the hotel safe of about $2,000 at the noon hour as the clerk left for a moment. I had driven her over to Surf City that she might take the train and thus elude the detectives.

The popularity of American flour in China is attracting attention on both sides of the globe. The British consul general at Canton in a report sent from China to London and published in that city states that the demand for flour among emigrants returned from the United States is so great that the quantity of flour imported in 1902 exceeded that of 1901 by 95,831,328 pounds and was also some 78,400,000 pounds in excess of the average for the past five years. Stated in dollars, we are now selling to the Chinese $4,607,000 worth of flour annually.

The Cuban republic is making an effort to encourage the restocking of the island with cattle, especially those of a good breed. The duty has been changed so that breeding sheep and cows come in free of cost, and the duty has been reduced on blooded stock. The government has also exempted barbed wire and staples used in building fences from the payment of the tariff duties, hoping thereby to encourage the inclosure of large pastures.

FIELDS FOR OUR TRADE
Siberia Likes American Machinery, Says Agent Greener.
RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT LENDS AID
Assists in the Distribution of American Agricultural Appliances—Possible Commercial Relations With India—Cuba Making an Effort to Restock Island With Cattle—Our Flour in China.

There is such a demand in Siberia for agricultural machinery and appliances of American manufacture that the minister of agriculture in that country has decided to lend government aid to its distribution. Commercial Agent Greener at Vladivostok informs the state department at Washington that a special fund has been set aside to establish at Habarovsk a government warehouse for the benefit of importing jobbers, says J. D. Whelpley in the New York Commercial Advertiser. The pre-Amur management of imperial properties will have charge and will operate to a large extent in American goods.
The Siberian officials state that they are greatly in need of information from competent sources regarding the purchase and importation of such goods from the United States, and they ask for the address of firms dealing in agricultural machinery, price lists and catalogues, lists of steamships plying between the United States and Vladivostok and the best terms upon which goods will be sold.
Mr. Greener also finds considerable complaint to the effect that in quoting prices American firms do not state their bottom figures. What is needed is the lowest quotation for goods, details as to payments in cash or on time, the latter being preferred, and several copies of a brief catalogue in the Russian language.

Consul General Patterson, at Calcutta, is confident that a large increase in the American trade would follow the establishment of a rapid and reliable freight line of steamers between New York and Calcutta. He says that the only way goods can be shipped at present from New York to Calcutta is via Glasgow, Liverpool, London or Naples, and there is long delay in making these shipments. Out of the $250,000,000 worth of goods imported annually by India the United States only had about 15 per cent of the trade, while England had about 67 per cent and Germany, France and Belgium, in the order named, the larger part of the remainder.

About 50 per cent of the imports are cotton goods, and the next largest are iron and steel manufactures, and the American consul sees no reason why the United States should not compete in these lines. He says that if a direct line of steamers was established between New York and Calcutta, sailing not less than once every month, the passage not to be more than forty days, the importers could then rely upon receiving their goods at specified times.
Consul Patterson also recommends the putting of active, capable men into the field to exploit the markets of the country. There are no restrictions on trade in India, the only obstacle being the lack of rapid transit and more determined effort to secure business.

In line with the suggestion made by Consul Patterson the bureau of statistics at Washington has been looking up the figures on the trade between India and the United States. India ranks sixth among the exporting and tenth among the importing countries. Last year her exports amounted to over $400,000,000 and her imports to $264,000,000. Thirty-six per cent of these imports were cottons. Next on the list were iron and steel products. The bureau estimates that 50 per cent of India's imports are of a class of goods which might be called indigenous to the United States and that fully three-fourths of the entire list is made up of articles successfully produced by and exported from the United States. Notwithstanding this fact, our exports to India amount to less than 2 per cent of the imports of that country.

LONG TIME SINCE TEAM FROM BIG LEAGUE WAS HERE.

Pittsburg Are Coming—Urbana Plays Here Aug. 15 and 16—The Day's Sporting News.

It has been many years since the people of Newark have had an opportunity of seeing a team from a major league play ball in this city. Many years ago Columbus and Baltimore played a game on the old Flory field at the head of Locust street. Both teams were then in the old American Association and such players were on the field as Greenwed, March Baldwin Townsend, Wheelock and others, all long since out of baseball.

Since that time many people have gone to Columbus but for the past four years only second class baseball has been seen there as Columbus has been a member of a minor league. Better baseball has been played by Idlewild team of this city than the article put up by the disorganized Senators.

It will therefore, be good news to baseball lovers to know that on Tuesday, September 1, they will have an opportunity of seeing the Pittsburg champions, by most experts conceded to be the greatest aggregation of ball players ever gotten together, play with the local team. It would be silly to expect or prophesy a victory against the Pirates for the Idlewild team, but it is more than reasonably certain that there will be a good contest. Such old heads as the two Francis boys, Freeman and Flick, will not go to pieces because they are pitted against the great team that will be their opponents. They will contest every point, and exert their best endeavors to prevent a runaway victory for Fred Clarke and his gang of penant chasers.

Everyone who can should make arrangements to get away on September 1. The announcement of the Pittsburg engagement is made thus early to enable everyone who can to arrange to attend the game. Many prominent merchants of the city have come to the management and suggested that they would close their stores during the two hours that the game will be played and this suggestion will be acted upon.

The event is one of importance to the city, and should be so considered by every business man in it. Millions of people in the United States watch every move the Pirates make, and the eyes of the sporting world will be turned toward Newark, O., on September 1. Every paper in the United States will carry the next day a telegraphic account of the game, sent from Newark, Monday in a fast game. Teddy Pursell allowed the visitors one hit. The fielding of Schwertzer was the feature.

The Score: R H E

Football Next Season.
All persons interested in football for the coming season, are asked to attend a meeting to be held in the Y. M. C. A. parlors Friday evening at 7:30, when plans will be discussed looking toward the organization of a strong team of Newark players.

DIVORCE

And Alimony Given Mrs. Frame, a Prominent Woman of Cambridge. Case Bitterly Contested.

Cambridge, O., Aug. 11—The divorce case of Dr. C. A. Frame vs. Caroline Frame, came to a sudden end yesterday afternoon.

Dr. Frame in his petition, alleged gross neglect of duty, and named William Blake Alexander, general manager of the Ohio and Northwestern Coal company of Cleveland, O., as co-respondent.

Mrs. Frame filed a cross petition asking for divorce, alimony and the custody of their three children.

All parties are prominent socially and the case was bitterly contested on both sides.

Judge Frazier in a lengthy resume of evidence refused the plaintiff a divorce stating no evidence had been submitted justifying a decree and allowed Mrs. Frame temporary alimony of $75 per month and the custody of children.

In regard to her prayer for divorce Judge Frazier said he would withhold his decision until next term of court, advising, in the mean time, a reconciliation.

This he was told was impossible and yesterday afternoon he granted Mrs. Frame a divorce, giving her the custody of the children, and all of Dr. Frame's city property, valued at $10,000. She is to pay all costs in the case and to give Dr. Frame $1000.

TEN CHILDREN.

Hurried to Pittsburg After Being Bitten by a Boy While They Were Playing.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 11—In Punxsutawney, a large mongrel dog ran down one of the streets snapping at people. A group of children were playing at a corner and the dog bounced among them, biting one after the other. Ten suffered ragged wounds from the dog's teeth. The children were taken to Dr. Williams, who cauterized the wounds and then ordered the dog shot. The head of the dog was sent to Dr. Letere, of the Magee Pathological Institute. He advised Dr. Williams the dog had rabies. Dr. Williams brought the 10 children here last night, to receive the Pasteur treatment.

The 3 year old son of George Kennedy of Blackville, W. Va., was also sent to the institute suffering from hydrophobia.

WOMAN SMOKER BURNS TO DEATH

Fails to Knock Fire from Pipe and a Blaze Started in the Pocket of Her Petticoat.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 11—Because she failed to knock the half-burned tobacco from a pipe before she put it in her petticoat pocket, Mrs. Taylor Greening, 64 years old yesterday sustained burns that caused her death.

Mrs. Greening and her husband were driving when Mrs. Greening, who had been smoking, and, believing the tobacco had no fire, placed it in her pocket.

In a few minutes her clothes were ablaze, and the woman inhaled the flames before her husband could smother them.

Mrs. Greening had lived near Loami for 60 years, and had smoked a pipe most of the time.

REUNION

Of the Billman-Haynes Families Held Saturday at Rain Rock—Officers Chosen.

The tenth annual reunion of the Billman-Haynes families was held at Rain Rock, thirteen miles northeast of Newark, on Saturday, August 8. The day was very pleasant and a much larger crowd than usual assembled to enjoy the pleasures of the occasion. This family and its connections in one of the largest and most respected in Licking county. Henry Billman and Henry Haynes came from the western part of Pennsylvania, about 1815, and settled in Coshocton county. Henry Billman and wife had 12 children, six boys and six girls of whom only one is now living, the popular "Uncle" George Billman, who is now living at an advanced but hearty old age. Mr. Joseph Billman, one of the six sons of Henry Billman, the founder of the family, intermarried with Miss Barbara Haynes, a daughter of Henry Haynes, and thus came about the union of these two families. Nine children were born of this union, of whom several are living, our well known citizens, Perry, Levi and Harvey Billman and four sisters. Mr. Leonard Billman is the son of a brother of George and Joseph Billman.

The forenoon was spent in singing songs and pleasant social enjoyment, followed by the discussion of a sumptuous dinner at noon. About 1 o'clock Mr. Harvey Billman as chairman of the day, called the assemblage to order, and Rev. Mr. White invoked the Divine blessing. The address of the day, historical and suited to the occasion, was then made by Judge E. M. P. Brister. Some very interesting and enjoyable recitations by the little ones, Gertrude Parker, Myrtle Parker, Derwood Colville, Vivian Mildred Colville and Laurence Colville. The little ones acquitted themselves beautifully, and elicited hearty applause, and thus closed the program of exercises.

The meeting then went into the election of officers for the ensuing year with the following result:

President, Harvey Billman.
Vice President, Perry Billman.
Secretary, Ida Billman.
Treasurer, Phin Miller.
Executive Committee, Laurence Colville, W. F. Holton, Levi Billman, R. J. C. Coffman.

The entire occasion was a delightful success and reflected great credit upon all who were engaged in it.

AN ORDINANCE.

Determining to proceed with the construction of a sewer on Hoover street from Eddy street to Buckingham street; and Buckingham street to Granville street.

Be it ordained by the Council of the City of Newark, State of Ohio:

Sec. 1. That it is hereby determined to proceed with the construction of a sewer on Hoover street, from Eddy street to Buckingham street and from Buckingham street to Granville street, pursuant to a resolution passed on the 6th day of July, 1903, and in accordance with the plans and specifications heretofore prepared by the Engineer or said City now on file in the office of the Auditor of said City.

Sec. 2. That the cost and expense of said improvement less the cost and expense of improving street, alley or highway intersections, and less one-fifth of the entire cost and expense shall be assessed upon the lots and lands abutting thereon and benefitted thereby by the foot front.

That the Board of Public Service be and hereby is authorized and directed to make and execute a contract for the construction of said improvement, with the lowest and best bidder, after advertisement according to law.

Sec. 3. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force from aid after its passage and the earliest period allowed by law.

Passed August 3, 1903.
HARRY ROSSEL, President.
FRANK T. MAURATH, Clerk.
I hereby approve the above ordinance this 4 day of August, 1903.

INSTITUTE

ABOUT SIXTY ENROLLED ON THE SECOND DAY

Tuesday Morning the First Address
Was Delivered by Dr. Keyes—A Prominent Educator.

The second day's session of the Licking County Teachers' Institute opened at 9:30 o'clock Tuesday morning with devotional exercises, led by Dr. Chas. Keyes, of Hartford, Conn.

The first address was delivered by Dr. Keyes on the subject of "Interest and Attention" in special reference to the younger children. The speaker is a prominent and successful educator who has made an especial study of methods of efficient instruction for the very young, and his lectures carry the weight of large experience and undoubted authority.

His manner is familiar yet dignified, and his style colloquial yet cultivated and elegant. His lectures command the undivided attention of all who attend, which is a most flattering compliment to the speaker and will redound to the benefit of his hearers.

After Dr. Keyes' lecture a short intermission was announced, during which time R. H. Nichols of Hanover was elected secretary of the Licking County Reading Circle, the election being made by acclamation.

The second address was read by Arthur D. Call, of Ansonia, Conn., and was the third of his series of talks on "The Ethical Aims of Education." His theme in the morning discourse was "Self Culture," and during its delivery every eye was turned in the speaker's direction, and every mind followed his reasoning, and endorsed his cogent arguments in favor of the thorough instruction and development of one's self physically, mentally, spiritually, so that in the great crises of life the individual may know what to do and have the resources of being at his command to do it.

Mr. Call is a young man of fine presence and thoroughly engaging personality as a speaker, and the interest in the series of twelve lectures increases at each session.

In our limited space no synopsis of these lectures can be printed that would be just to Mr. Call or of benefit to the reader, but a very short outline is herewith published giving the points that were amplified and given profuse illustration from lives and characters of historical personages of ancient and modern times.

Ethics of Self Culture.

I. Prima facie classes of activities are: Altruistic, occultly altruistic and egotistic. Illustrations.

II. The rules for self culture in the light of the "categorical imperative."

1. The sedulous cultivation of health for vitality, longevity, placidity, reserve, independence and freedom, common weal.

2. The education, discipline and storing of the mind. The dignity of the human intellect closely related to freedom, apperception, companionship, power, genuineness, success.

3. The ethics of Real Ambition, hunger for the ideal.

4. The ethics of occupation; necessity of work and vice of idleness. Value in the enthusiasm of youth. Essentials and dangers in the choice of a life-work.

5. The maintenance of rights and the doctrine of the non-resistance to evil—illustrations, as Jean Valjean and others.

6. The doctrine of enjoyment in the dutiful life—vocation and avocation. He concluded as follows:

"I should say, fellow workers, that if these principles can be taught to your pupils and in a way such as will manifest itself in the practical routine of the home life, on the street, in the school, in the secret halls of thought, why then good; if not, worthless."

During the morning Dr. C. C. Miller, superintendent of the Lima schools, arrived and delivered the third address on "History as It Is Made."

In his address the speaker gave a resume of the principal events that have happened recently and their relation and application to the history of the times as it will be written. He spoke at length of the importance of correlating events of current happening, accurately in their bearing on the history of the time of their occurrence. Many examples were given notably the death of Pope Leo XIII. and the revolution in Serbia. It is of great importance that these events and their relation to current history should be rightly and efficiently impressed on the minds of pupils.

No one agency, argued Dr. Miller, is such a potent one for education along this line as the daily newspaper, and he paid a high compliment to the journalism of today in its accuracy of recording the news as well as the aims and ambitions of the papers as evinced by the discriminating and thoroughly efficient manner in giving due prominence to events in the order of their importance.

QUERIES FOR TEACHERS.

Through your columns I would like to submit the following questions to the worthy instructors and members of the Teachers' Institute now in session in our city.

1. Should teachers of all grades cultivate a personal as well as official acquaintance with their pupils outside the school-room?

2. Or should teachers hold themselves aloof from any off-duty intercourse with their pupils in order to preserve their "dignity?"

3. Would the teacher's work be facilitated, or would it be hindered, by a friendly acquaintance with his or her pupils?

4. If it be desirable that ministers should become well acquainted with their people in order to preach to them acceptably and profitably, does the same principle apply to teachers and pupils?

5. If close acquaintance with sympathy and attachment be so desirable between parents and children, is it also desirable and important, that teachers and pupils should both like and respect one another? Has anyone ever claimed that parents may be too intimate and friendly with their children.

6. If it be true that teachers can not separate their personality from their instruction, and that they must needs impress themselves (then characters) upon their pupils, is it worth while for them to make their personality agreeable and interesting to their pupils as well as the subject matter of their instruction?

7. If true teaching is "character building" as well as imparting instruction, should teachers know all phases of their pupils' characters as far as possible?

8. And is it possible for them to understand their pupils' characters without a more or less intimate and friendly acquaintance with them?

9. Does love for their teacher quicken and stimulate the faculties of children and make them more interested in their studies? And does sympathy and love for their pupils tend to increase the efficiency and develop the ability of all teachers?

10. How far might the following scriptural narrative be considered an answer to these questions? "And Gehazi passed on before them, and laid the prophet's staff upon the face of the child, but there was neither voice nor hearing. Wherefore he went again to meet him, and told him, saying, The child is not awaked."

"And when Elisha was come into the house, behold the child was dead and laid upon his bed."

"He went in therefore and shut the door upon them twain, and prayed unto the Lord."

"And he went up and lay upon the child, and put his mouth upon his mouth and his eyes upon his eyes, and his hands upon his hands, and he stretched himself upon the child, and the flesh of the child waxed warm."

"Then he returned and walked in the house to and fro, and went up and stretched himself upon him; and the child sneezed seven times and the child opened his eyes!"

Most Respectfully,

PHILANDER PEABODY.

It was decided that the sessions in the morning and afternoon open with singing.

The following is a synopsis of Mr. Arthur Call's lecture:

"Ethics and the Ideal Moral Life"

A. The main different interpretations of the moral ideal.

1. Hedonism—the ethics of the sentient life, early influence of Socrates and Protagoras.

2. Cyrenaicism the pure type of Hedonism, first taught by Aristippus; cf. also Horace, Omar Khayyam, Heine, Byron, etc.

3. Epicureanism modified Hedonism first taught by Epicurus. The degenerating influence of this doctrine.

4. Utilitarianism a modern modification of Hedonism. Cf. Mill, Bentham, Paley, etc.

II. Rigorism, the ethics of the rational life, founded also in the teachings of Socrates, Plato and Aristotle. Two kinds:

1. Extreme Rigorism—its four streams:

(1). Cynicism founded in the teachings of Antisthenes, later of Diogenes. The failure of Cynicism.

(2). Stoicism as illustrated in the teachings of Zeno, Epictetus, Marcus Aurelius, Frederick Nietzsche and others.

(3). Asceticism of Simeon Stylites, Buddha, Tolstoi.

(4). Transcendentalism and the teachings of Kant and Emerson.

2. Moderate Rigorism dating to the teachings of Heraclitus, Plato and Aristotle. The birth and growth of Intuitionism.

III. Eudaemonism the ethics of total self-realization. The place of passions and appetites, together with the duty of teachers and parents. Illustrations of Eudaemonism from the teachings of Plato, Aristotle, Butler, Hegel, Goethe's Faust, Wagner's Tannhauser, Shakespeare's Tempest, Browning's Rabbi Ben Ezra. The ideal the performance of all duties including the duty to study duty.

B. Essential elements in this ideal moral life: Reverence, its nature, value—how taught; Perfection, its relation to little things and to all progress; Affection and the new view of the dignity of the common man; Strenuousness in the face of difficulties as unpleasantness, criticism, temptation, self-control, and the like; Moral Thoughtfulness, its nature, relation to habit, how acquired; hero-worship; Duty dignified as against the awful waste from moral cowardice; Duty separated from the notion of self-denial.

C. Conclusion:

In our struggle for reverence, for perfection, for affection, for strenuousness, for moral thoughtfulness, for dutifulness, for the grace of service to the social purpose, let us not forget in these latter days fleeing into the gone forever, in this omnipresent and only reality now, that it is all important that we be not ashamed of honest feeling, that we do not treat love and worship with cynical flippancy, that we rise out of the sordid and commonplace notion that life is simply to make a living, that love is but for the selfish satisfaction of a passing desire, and that we accustom ourselves to the thought that we are dignified units in a great cosmical process aiming toward an Uebermensch indeed, a "Beyond-man" quite worth the price of all the struggle and all the pain.
